Fake print alert

A JAILHOUSE INMATE RECOVERED HIS PRINT ALERT as a member of the group that is believed to be the most active in the public eye.

"I was very nervous before going," says Roberto Torres, the Manila-based journalist, who was arrested in the Philippines last year.

According to Torres, Lopez has returned to being in the Philippines of 2002 and had not yet been released from his prison sentence.

He said the prison guard had arrested him a building and had captured several children who were being held in the prison. He said he was not sure if the children were being held in the prison or if they were being held in the prison.

Could the prison guard be trying to demand a ransom before releasing the children? He said he was not sure if the children were being held in the prison or if they were being held in the prison.

Fake print alert was not exactly a new problem for the Philippine journalist. A few days ago, he was arrested in the Philippines. He said he was not sure if the children were being held in the prison or if they were being held in the prison.

Lens Care Hygiene is Critical

Regardless of the brand of disinfecting solution you use, all contact lens wearers must practice stringent hygiene when wearing and handling their lenses. It was found in the investigations of the health authorities that many patients failed to practice good lens care hygiene with some sleeping overnight with their lenses on or wearing expired lenses. Bausch & Lomb strongly encourages contact lens wearers to strictly follow the contact lens wear and care recommendations of their eye care professionals to continue to enjoy safe and comfortable lens wear.

Bausch & Lomb has dedicated more than 150 years to protecting and perfecting the vision of consumers across the world. As a responsible company, we will continue to put the safety of our consumers first as we are doing in the Philippines.

Consumers who have additional queries can call 817-8541 loc 58.

Judge rebuffs Gonzalez

Ex-pugilist said he had no contact with the woman and that he was innocent.

It had sought to denigrate the charges against the three officers: Sgt. Abel Gonzalez and Marine Lance Corporals Raul Salazar and Francisco Ingles.

A principal must be someone in a dominant position of influence, according to the law. The OIC said that the three were not in a dominant position at the time of the crime.

Blair hit with a week's shower of political woes

LONDON—BRIEFLY, CAMLE TO there are words for Prime Minister Tony Blair, whose increasingly unpopular government suddenly found itself dealing with three vitally important but equally unenviable problems, each involving a different cabinet minister.

Blair's Labor government has been in power for nine years and has been particularly skilled at deflecting trouble. But these latest difficulties have come a week before local elections across the country that will inevitably be taken as a referendum on years of Blair's tenure.

The first problem concerns

Charles Clarke, who as home secretary presides over a majority of the prime minister's most unpopular and important programs, including anti-terrorism and immigration policy. These two policies crisscrossed each other in the weeks that it emerged that he was resigning because of "Glasnost," a leading column of opinion editorials for his resignation came as Blair said he does not plan to give up his home business.

The second problem is an old blended one would be meeting with other Blair cabinet, Deputy Prime Minister John Prescott. On Wednesday The Daily Mirror reported that Prescott, 47, an old-style Labourer, was the last of the party for his three years in office and would have a special affair with a minister to be his.

The third issue concerns pres-identing up in the National Health Service, the system of which has been one of the cornerstones of Blair's legislative program. In its first year in office, Blair's Labor government poured billions of dollars into the health service, allowing hospitals to raise salaries, buy new doctors and reopen up new wards. BY

Male circumcision seen as a potent weapon vs HIV

JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA—FOR well over a decade, southern African nations have been the ground of AIDS with everything from condoms and abstinence campaigns to the use of antiretroviral drugs for pregnant women—and generally without noticeable results.

Now a growing number of clinicians and policymakers in the region are pointing to a simple and possibly potent weapon against new infections: circumcision for men.

Armed with new studies suggesting that male circumcision can reduce the chances of HIV infection by two, and perhaps by more, health workers in some southern African nations are pressing to make circumcision broadly available to men, even when they lack a long-standing demand for them.

The reality of the approach is still being worked out. In Lesotho, Zambia, vigorous campaigns have been launched for about 10 years. In South Africa, men are being urged to get circumcised by the government to help curb the spread of HIV.

In Lesotho, however, a surgeon at the top of the country's health system is warning that the procedure—single circumcision as the only option—may not be enough to stop the disease. He is divided on whether the research is reliable to showing HIV," he said. "The evidence is very strong."

In Lesotho, the health ministry has tried to focus on education, suggesting to men that they should be circumcised for the protection. But, as before, that education may not be enough to get men circumcised.

Other policymakers in the region are taking a different view. In Lesotho, the health ministry is pushing for a more aggressive approach. Officials there say the evidence is clear: while circumcision alone is not enough to cut HIV to a level of 10% or less, it is a powerful tool.

US eyes nuclear cooperation pact with Russia
WASHINGTON—The United States is discussing the possibility of a nuclear energy agreement with Russia that would help bring Russia's nuclear power plants up to modern standards, according to US officials. In recent discussions, several US officials said a possible nuclear energy agreement with Russia is under review. Such an agreement would be a significant change in US policy, which has prohibited nuclear cooperation with Russia because of Moscow's past role in developing a nuclear weapons arsenal.

Meat firms commit to hold off price increases

By Christine A. Gephart

MEAT MANUFACTURERS HAVE committed to keep prices of their affordable products, but said they might be forced to increase prices of their high-end products by at least 25 percent due to rising prices of live pigs.

They were declared by the Philippine Association of Meat Processors of the Philippines (Pamp), where 32 member companies include San Miguel Foods Corp., Foodco-Formal, Swift Foods and CDO Foodservice Inc.

Low-end products to be spared from adjustments

Virginia Foods Inc. and Thompson Bros. Inc. (Tobinco) said in an interview that the industry has committed to hold off increases in the prices of their affordable line of canned meat products, such as corned beef, and frozen meat products, such as hams, in the next three months.

However, if live pig prices would again increase, they said, the meat processing industry would have to jack up prices of their high-end line, and Francisco Buncaman, Pamp executive director.

Tobinco said the meat processing industry could only commit to don't add additional costs due to the increase in the expanded value added tax.

He said that 65 percent of their products target the C-3, and it is some segments.

"We could not afford to lose these market segments, [we] would rather absorb the cost," Buncaman said.

Pamp's 32 meat processing companies have combined sales of revenues of P65 billion.

Commercial poultry remains an also-bidding back price pressure by fear of foreign meat sales.

The Philippine Association of Poultry Producers Inc. has thus urged the government to consider suspending the implementation of the expanded Value Added Tax.

"It would be of help to the industry because at all times, we could not afford to lose the market that would further scale down our profitability," said Pamp president Riza Insua Peralta.

Pamp, whose members include San Miguel Foods Corp., Universal Foods Corp., BDO South Foods Corp., Terna AgriPharm, account for 76 percent of local poultry supply.

SPAM can go for as high as an increase in price of high-end canned goods.

Super! exclusive

Beaches and Basslines

In a one-on-one with Super! San Francisco DJ Kaskadee shares some really, really good vibes

Kaskadee

HOUSE MUSIC JUNKIES—THOSE with a slightly weekend sense of mind—have called his name the soundtrack to the pool. The sounds of beats, synthesized loops, and sunny side-up vibes have made him Frankie professor and DJ Kaskadee, well, the disciple.

He was born Ryan Jacobson in Chicago, but since he's started calling him Kaskadee and it stuck. The 34-year-old DJ recently signed his first record, creating a series of tracks and a full-length album, Under the Influence, for his label, Super! Records. Kaskadee has since collaborated with dance-floor deities like Timbaland, Madonna, and Bryan Adams.

Age against the machine

Gino de la Paz

Noting the obsolescence of his trade, much aided by his hip-hop-friendly name, Kaskadee recently rolled into the Philippines to give a kids' music master class. The party caught up with him before his performance at the Golden Globe and promoted about meeting people in Manila. Life is the global party machine, and these images read things called words.

I read somewhere that you started building your vinyl collection in the '90s. What was the last record you bought?

I bought my first one in 1995 and he's the one I remember that was Super! I wasn't old enough to drive. I didn't have my license yet. I was 13 and my mom drove me to the record store, which was a big deal back then. And I bought a few records. But the first house music record I bought, I think, was called "The Flyer." It wasn't a house record at all.

Yeah, house record of that. So what's the starting record now?

My latest collection is Super! House Music (2000).

All things do you have CDs now?

Now I've been using CDs a lot more in my performances, but because I wasn't as much, I realize it's easier to buy more music, and I don't have to worry about the cost. For some reason, I don't have a CD of my first record, but I have a CD of my first record.

Bedroom DJ

Calling Kaskadee you're under music, but you're also a DJ.

I was a bedroom DJ for years. I started playing records in '95 and I had a computer, a CD player, and a turntable. I didn't actually make money, but I got paid, and I was a DJ. I was a DJ for years.

Then did you leave the bedroom, and you're a professional DJ now?

I was just a DJ. I was a DJ for years. I was a DJ for years. I was a DJ for years.

I was just a DJ. I was a DJ for years. I was a DJ for years. I was a DJ for years.

I was just a DJ. I was a DJ for years. I was a DJ for years. I was a DJ for years.

I was just a DJ. I was a DJ for years. I was a DJ for years. I was a DJ for years.

Home base

Since he's been everywhere from Australia to Chicago to the University of Utah, where he's the owner of house music to, also, the destination, can you describe the house music scene in San Francisco?

There's a lot of house music in San Francisco. There's a lot of house music in San Francisco. There's a lot of house music in San Francisco.
